About Oxford House, Inc.

Oxford House, Inc. is the Delaware nonprofit, 501(c)(3) corporation that serves as the umbrella organization of the worldwide network of more than 2,900 individual Oxford Houses. Its central office is at 1010 Wayne Avenue, Suite 300, Silver Spring, Maryland 20910.

Oxford House™ is a concept and system of operations based on the experience of recovering alcoholics and drug addicts who learned that behavior change is essential to recover from alcoholism, drug addiction or co-occurring mental illness. They also learned that Oxford House™ provided the living environment that could help them become comfortable enough with recovery behavior to stay clean and sober without relapse.

The Oxford House Manual® is the basic blueprint that provides the organization and structure that permit groups of recovering individuals to successfully live together in a supportive environment. All Oxford Houses are rented, ordinary, single-family houses in good neighborhoods. There are Oxford Houses for men and Oxford Houses for women but there are no co-ed houses. The average number of residents per house is about 8 with a range per house of 6 to 16.

Oxford Houses work because they have no time limit on how long a resident can live in an Oxford House™ and because they all adhere to the charter conditions that require that: [1] the group must be democratically self-run following the policies and procedures of the Oxford House Manual®; [2] the group must be financially self-supporting; and [3] the group must immediately expel any resident who returns to using alcohol or illicit drugs.

Oxford House™ charters are provided free to groups of 6 or more recovering individuals of the same gender starting an Oxford House™. Oxford Houses provide the time, peer support and structured living environment necessary for long-term behavior change to take hold.

Oxford House™ has only been in the state of Washington since 1990 and the two Oxford Houses started then are still operating. Not only that but year by year the number of Oxford Houses in the state has increased until now there are 343 Oxford Houses with 2,975 beds in the state. This report is a profile of the statewide network of Oxford Houses based on a survey of residents in August 2020.

Oxford House™ was the only recovery-housing program listed on the 2011 federal National Registry of Evidence-based Programs and Practices [NREPP]. Oxford House™ was also singled out in the 2016 Surgeon General's Report "Facing Addiction in America." Moreover, more than 200 DePaul University studies since 1992 have confirmed the value of Oxford House™ in fostering long-term recovery.

The Washington Oxford House Survey

In August 2020, 2,103 of the 2,605 individuals residing in the Washington Oxford Houses (80.7%) completed a detailed survey describing them and their recovery progress. The survey questions have been asked of Oxford House™ residents since 1988. The surveys provide an indication of who is being served by Oxford House™ and how Oxford House living is fueling their road to long-term recovery.

This report presents the results of the survey and describes how Oxford Houses fit into the continuum of care that many professionals believe is essential for long-term recovery from alcoholism, drug addiction and co-occurring mental illness. In 2011, Oxford House™ was listed as a best practice on the federal government’s National Registry of Evidence-based Programs and Practices (NREPP) maintained by SAMHSA. In 2016, the then-Surgeon General, in his report, “Facing Addiction”, singled out Oxford House™ as a model for recovery homes. The current Surgeon General reiterated that conclusion when he spoke at the 2019 Oxford House World Convention in Washington, DC.¹

Washington is the state with the most Oxford Houses. That state has supported Oxford House™ development since 1989 and that support has greatly enhanced Oxford House expansion. The state’s dedication to Oxford House development has transformed thousands of lives.

Background

Washington began supporting the development of self-run, self-supported Oxford Houses in 1990. A strong statewide network of 343 Oxford Houses has since spread throughout the state. During August of this year, Washington Oxford House residents completed a detailed survey about their addiction and Oxford House living. The survey was completed by 2,103 of the then 2,605 residents [80.7%]. The four houses shown below have all been operating for 30 years and provided the foundation for today's network of 343 Washington Oxford Houses.

These are all ordinary single-family houses that are being used for the extraordinary purpose of providing groups of individuals recovering from addiction the opportunity to gain the peer recovery support they need to become comfortable enough in recovery to avoid relapse.

Part 1 – Profile of the Current Washington Oxford House Population

Gender

When the residents were surveyed in March 2020, 2,103 of the 2,605 [80.7%] residents completed the survey. All the existing houses participated; 66% of the participants were men and 34% were women. As of August 2020, Washington has 108 women’s Oxford Houses in the state and 235 men’s Oxford Houses for a total network of 343 in the state.

The Oxford Houses have bed space in the state for 2,031 men and 944 for women [total beds 2,975]. Of the 108 Oxford Houses for women, 19 take women with children. Of the 235 Houses for men, 19 of them take children. During FY 2020 [July 1, 2019 – June 30, 2020], the statewide network of Oxford Houses served

5,405 individuals. Of the individuals living in Washington Oxford Houses in FY 2020, 1,339 [24.7%] were expelled because of relapse. (For more discussion of relapse, see the section on treatment history on the next page.)

Length of Recovery

Within each Oxford House, there are differences in how long residents have been in recovery. Partly because there is no time limit on residency within an Oxford House, individuals are able to stay as long as they want, provided they do not drink alcohol or use illicit drugs. The absence of a residency time limit contributes greatly to the overall success rate of Oxford House living. Every individual is different and some adapt to the behavior change needed for long-term recovery quickly; others take years to become comfortable in the behavior needed to assure long-term recovery.

The current length of sobriety does not necessarily mean that an individual’s total time of recovery falls within the timeframe of living in an Oxford House. Some individuals may have some length of sobriety before moving into a house. For example, the survey shows that 32.6% of the respondents have 2 years or more of sobriety. Some may have picked up sober time in prison before coming into an Oxford House. The various lengths of recovery time allow “new-comers” to learn the value of long-term recovery from the “old-timers” in recovery. They also learn that their own stay in an Oxford House does not have to be limited.

Treatment History

The federal government maintains the Treatment Episode Data Set [TEDS], which identifies the prior treatment characteristics for the one in seven individuals who actually gets treatment.² The TEDS data shows that, on average, those in treatment have had a little more than three previous treatment episodes. A remarkable 15% of those in treatment have been in treatment five times or more. Fewer than 25% are in treatment for the first time. The median number of times Washington Oxford House residents had been through treatment was four.

The prior treatment episodes for the Oxford House population also show repeated times in formal treatment, usually followed by relapse. As a matter of fact, many professionals in the field proclaim relapse to be part of the disease. Oxford House™ from its beginning has emphasized that relapse does not have to be the norm. The Oxford House™ emphasis is on recovery without relapse.

Times in Treatment Prior to Living in Oxford House
 (Percent by selected states: 2019-20)

No. of Times in Formal Treatment	VA %	OK %	TX %	NC %	WV %	IN %	WA %
One	16.1	25.6	23.9	18.2	22.3	18.9	16.5
Two	24.2	23.5	18.8	20.0	18.9	24.8	24.1
Three to Five	41.9	27.4	31.9	44.1	27.7	49.7	43.3
Six to Ten	12.9	16.7	13.8	10.9	16.8	4.6	11.0
More than Ten	04.8	6.8	11.6	06.3	14.3	2.0	5.1

Respondents to the survey were asked to name their last formal treatment provider and 87% of them [1,827] listed a treatment provider. The top four providers were American Behavioral Health Systems (A.B.H.S), 247 residents; Lifeline Connections, 137; Lake Side Milam Recovery Center, 120; and Sundown M Ranch, 114. All of the providers and the number of residents who indicated attendance are listed in Attachment A.

Almost a quarter [24.7%] of the individuals living in Washington Oxford Houses during FY 2020 were asked to leave because of relapse; three quarters of residents did not relapse. Oxford House does not track individuals after they stop living in an Oxford House, but studies suggest that the system of operations and the open-ended residency policy enables the development of long-term recovery. A National Institute of Drug Abuse [NIDA] - financed study by DePaul University [Grant # DA 13231] followed 897 residents living in 219 Oxford Houses across the country for 27 months. The DePaul researchers found that only 13% returned to using alcohol or illicit drugs.³ The DePaul study took place in 2007 – a number of years before the current opioid epidemic.

While 61.1% of the surveyed Washington Oxford House residents had abused opioids, only 35.6%, slightly more than half of the opioid users, are using medically-assisted treatment [MAT]. For most of those, the medicine is buprenorphine, although several are on methadone.

Starting in the first Oxford House in 1975, individual Oxford Houses have developed systems to assure that medication for co-occurring mental illness is monitored. Often a house will require a ² There are about 25 million alcoholics, drug addicts and those with co-occurring mental illness. Of that number, fewer than 1.7 million get formal treatment each year. TEDS data includes information from the annual pool of those in treatment.

³ Addictive Behaviors 32 (2007) 803-818

lock box and other safeguards to make certain that medication is not stolen or misused. Over the last few years medication to assist in recovery from opioid addiction has required the same kind of monitoring and protection. In a recent article in ALCOHOLISM TREATMENT QUARTERLY, John Majer, PhD, Leonard Jason, PhD and others found that “Oxford Houses provide valuable social support that helps persons utilizing MATs in their recovery.”⁴

Because prior opioid users are in the Oxford House population, each Oxford House group teaches its residents about the use of Narcan. The survey did not inquire as to whether or not opioid overdoses had occurred to residents during the past year. However, Oxford House outreach personnel train house residents to have and to be able to use Narcan. In the event an opioid overdose happens, the individual is hopefully ‘saved’ and then expelled from the House.

Racial Diversity

The egalitarian nature of alcoholism and drug addiction cuts across all racial and ethnic groups. The graph below shows the diversity of the Washington Oxford House population.

This diversity is reflected in the individual houses throughout the state. Native Americans constitute 7.8% of the Oxford House population but only 1.9% of the state’s population. The African-American population of the state is 4.4% but the African American population of the state’s Oxford Houses is only 3.5%. The White Oxford House population is almost identical to the percentage of Whites in the state’s population. Overall the racial diversity of the Oxford House population reflects not only the egalitarian nature of the disease but also the absence of discrimination among Oxford House residents who vote in new residents.

Age of Residents

The average age of residents in Washington Oxford Houses is 37.7. The ages range from 17 to 72. The median age is 35, which is about 4 years younger than the national average median age. There seem to be two reasons for the younger average and median ages: [1] the opioid epidemic has adversely affected younger individuals and [2] the recent expansion of Oxford Houses means that there are fewer “old-timers” in the statewide network of Oxford Houses.

Washington Oxford Houses have a lower percentage of veterans [5.6%] than do networks of Oxford Houses nationally [18%]. This may be because the overall age of residents is younger. Nevertheless, OHI will increase its outreach to veterans because the need is great.

<https://doi.org/10.1080/07347324.2019.1678445>

Marital Status

Well over half of the Washington Oxford House residents [65%] have never been married. Addiction wreaks havoc with relationships and over thirty percent who had been married are divorced or separated by the time they arrive at an Oxford House. The graph at the left shows the marital status of the residents in the Washington network of Oxford Houses. This finding tracks the marital status of residents in the national network of Oxford Houses. However, the “never married” category is about 5% higher for Washington residents and this factor is probably related to the fact that residents in Washington Oxford Houses have the same average age but the median at 35 is a little younger.

Education

The diversity of the Oxford House population is also demonstrated by the variation in educational attainment among the residents. The highest level of formal education among the Washington Oxford House residents ranges from the 2nd grade to college graduation.

The range of educational attainment level among residents serves as a reminder of the egalitarian nature of alcoholism, drug addiction and co-occurring mental illness. The median educational attainment level is 12 years -11.8 the average. Since a little over 30% of the residents have not graduated from high school, the state and OHI should make certain that all the Oxford Houses in the state have up-to-date information about how to obtain a GED. On the other hand, 8.4% have a four-year college degree and 33.6% have had some education beyond high school.⁵ It is possible to build into the recovery culture within Oxford House an understanding that early recovery can be a good time to improve educational attainment.

⁵ Notice that the percentages in the Educational Attainment graph exceed 100% because of the overlap between “high school graduates” and those with “some college” or “college graduates.”

In some states, community colleges and universities welcome Oxford House residents and the residents take advantage of their open-ended residency in an Oxford House to gain further education. The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill has two Oxford Houses dedicated to students and there are 17 other Oxford Houses in Chapel Hill where some students live. When the Covid-19 pandemic passes, OHI will reach out to community colleges and universities in the state to share how some schools are using Oxford Houses to support recovery among students.

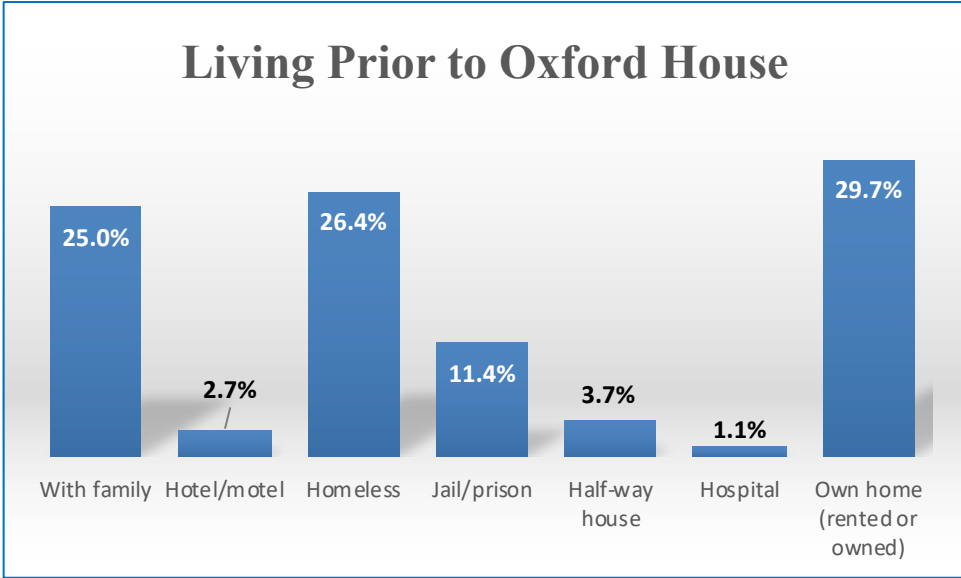

Employment

The survey of residents took place in August 2020. The national shutdown because of the pandemic had recently begun. At the same time, 65.6% of respondents were employed. The average monthly income – from both employment and other sources – was $2,075, a little more than the June 2019 national average of $1,695. The median income was $1,837.

Since the equal expense share cost of living in an Oxford House averages $122 per week [range $70-$156] in Washington, the income per person is more than adequate. The equal expense share covers all household expenses except for a resident’s food. The largest household expense is the rent the group pays the landlord, which in Washington averages $1,870 a month with a range from $1,000 to $4,700 a month.

Prior Living Situation

Almost all residents of Oxford House are enjoying a significant improvement in living arrangements over what they had before moving into an Oxford House.

Nearly half [45.3%] of the individuals who moved into a Washington Oxford House were previously living in what can best be described as marginal living situations – homeless, jail, motel, hospital or halfway house. The 25% “living with family” could be added to the marginal living situation in most cases. In all cases, the prior living situation failed to get or keep the individuals on the path to recovery. If it had, they would not have applied to and been accepted to move into an Oxford House.

Homelessness

When we look at the survey responses in more detail, past homelessness and incarceration stand out. Homelessness was experienced at least twice by 79.2% of all respondents and was for a median length of time of 8 months. The median number of times a person found themselves homeless was twice. When an addict completes detoxification and returns to homelessness, the chance that he or she will stay clean and sober is very unlikely. For the person who has been homeless who moves into an Oxford House, the difference is great. Among other things, in an

Oxford House a person has a safe place to live rather than in a crowded homeless shelter or on the streets. A person also has his or her own key to a real house in a real neighborhood. For many, that fact alone provides a sense of self-esteem and pride. This is true for both as an alternative to homelessness or incarceration.

The fact that the Oxford House provides a safe, clean and comfortable living environment is in and of itself a big incentive to continue on the path of recovery. To stay in that place to live requires not taking a drink of alcohol or using an illicit drug because such action would result in immediate expulsion. Postponing taking a drink of alcohol or using an illicit drug becomes a small price to pay for staying in an Oxford House. Soon, days become weeks, and weeks, months and recovery becomes a valuable habit. The Oxford House resident then has substantially increased the odds that long-term recovery without relapse is likely.

Jail Time

The vast majority [81%] of Washington Oxford House residents have served jail or prison time.

The median time of incarceration was 9 months, with an average of 24 months. The length of incarceration is from a few days to over twenty years. Most have been introduced to recovery programs while in jail or prison. In the 12-Step programs, there is a saying that addicts in recovery need to avoid the places, people and things associated with their addictive use. That is easier said than done but, for individuals leaving jail or prison, Oxford House becomes a feasible way to avoid old associates and old neighborhoods. Over 11 percent of the residents came directly from jail or prison into an Oxford House.

12-Step Meetings and Counselling

Living in an Oxford House provides 24/7 peer recovery support and the living environment encourages attending a lot of 12-Step meetings. The respondents indicated that the average number of such meetings they attend each week is 3. That number is 50% more than the number that a person not living in an Oxford House attends. AA tries to estimate the number of AA meetings members attend each week and has found that it about two meetings a week.

In addition to attending lots of AA/NA meetings, 49.7% of respondents to the survey indicated they attended weekly counselling sessions with a therapist. Many of these individuals were participants in medically assisted treatment programs (MAT). As indicated previously, 42% of those who are addicted to opioids are using MAT.

Importance of Oxford House Living to Recovery

Respondents to the survey were asked two questions to measure their personal satisfaction with Oxford House: [1] how important is it to your own recovery, and [2] would you recommend it to others?

Fewer than 1% would not recommend Oxford House to others. However, 98% felt it was very important to their own recovery. It should be noted that the three who would not recommend Oxford House were newcomers who had been in Oxford House less than two weeks. The vast majority of residents indicated that they would recommend Oxford House to others and also indicated that living in an Oxford House was “very important” to their own recovery. The “maybe” group consisted of 85 individuals who did not fit into any specific category. They may have been contrarians or simply indecisive. When asked to explain, one of the “maybes” said, “You have to be a recovering addict and who would want to wish addiction on anyone.” Perhaps the question needs refinement, or it may be that it is too much to expect universal endorsement – perhaps 96% approval is enough.

The outreach worker is trained by Oxford House Inc. for the following tasks:

- ◆ Finding a suitable house to rent
- ◆ Getting a charter from OHI
- ◆ Getting an FEIN number from IRS
- ◆ Recruiting initial residents
- ◆ Teaching residents how to operate house
- ◆ Building mutually supportive chapters
- ◆ Balancing supply of houses to demand
- ◆ Developing linkages to providers
- ◆ Developing employment linkages
- ◆ Documenting success/failure

Key to the smooth running Washington State Network of Oxford Houses is the day in and day out of trained outreach workers who help keep the statewide network of 343 individual houses motivated and on track. In the early years this included Myrna Brown, who lived in the first Washington State Oxford House and stays involved more than 30 years later. All the outreach workers are alumni of Oxford House and share their experience, strength and hope about recovery and Oxford House success. The box at the left outlines some of the important skills each outreach worker brings to the success of Oxford Houses including the self-run, self-supported system of operation.

Part 2 – How Oxford Houses Work

Each Oxford House™ is self-run and self-supported. Within the Oxford House™ community, it is often remarked that “The inmates run the asylum.” They do. Such participatory democracy not only is cost-efficient, but it also provides the foundation for personal change. Each resident rises to the occasion whether it is by voting on acceptance of a new resident, expelling a resident who relapses, carrying out the duties of being a house officer, or simply voting on an issue at a weekly House business meeting. All of the processes and procedures are set forth in the Oxford House Manual® and related materials.⁶ With the mutual support and supervision that individual Oxford Houses provide for each other through chapters and statewide associations, uniformity and quality control is assured. In Washington, one can visit an Oxford House in Seattle, Spokane, Bremerton, Everett or anywhere else in the state and immediately recognize that the particular recovery group within each house is following the same set of procedures and protocols. Oxford House, Inc. has not only provided a full set of operational manuals but also has taken the time to teach the group the basic procedures than enable a recovery group to function well. Visiting any one of the more than 2,900 Oxford Houses throughout the country provides the same affirmation.

Each weekly House business meeting illustrates participatory democracy and pragmatic problem-solving in action. Each meeting opens with a reading of one of the nine Oxford House Traditions. This underscores the purpose of Oxford House and sets the tone for the entire meeting. The House President calls the meeting to Order and asks the Secretary to read the minutes of the last business meeting. The minutes are then either accepted by majority vote or amended based on a motion to amend followed by majority vote. Robert’s Rules of Order dictates parliamentary procedures. The Treasurer reports on the balance of the group’s checking account; the Comptroller reports on whether every resident is up to date in paying an equal share of household expenses; and the Chore Coordinator reports on how well the residents have adhered to the chore list during the previous week.

Oxford House Officers

- President
- Secretary

- Comptroller
- Chore Coordinator

The group then considers new business, which may range from a personality issue within the house or plans for a social event such as a picnic or bowling. Since each office is term limited to six-months every resident is likely to serve in one or more of the offices.

Just as many large families have get-togethers to share each other’s company and knowledge, Oxford Houses do too. The officers of each individual house get together once a month at a Chapter meeting. Those meetings also follow disciplined procedures and elect officers. They also stage events to enjoy getting together in non-drinking, non-using “fun” activities. During the pandemic, most of these get-togethers are via Zoom.

⁶ Oxford House is organized from the bottom-up. In addition to the basic Oxford House Manual® there is an Oxford House Chapter Manual®, an Oxford House World Council Manual® and an Oxford House State Association Manual®. Along with a growing number of standardized forms these manuals provide a definitive blueprint for each Oxford House to uniformly follow processes and procedures that reflect the successful formula that makes Oxford House™ the only best practice listed on the National Registry of Evidence-base Programs and Practices.

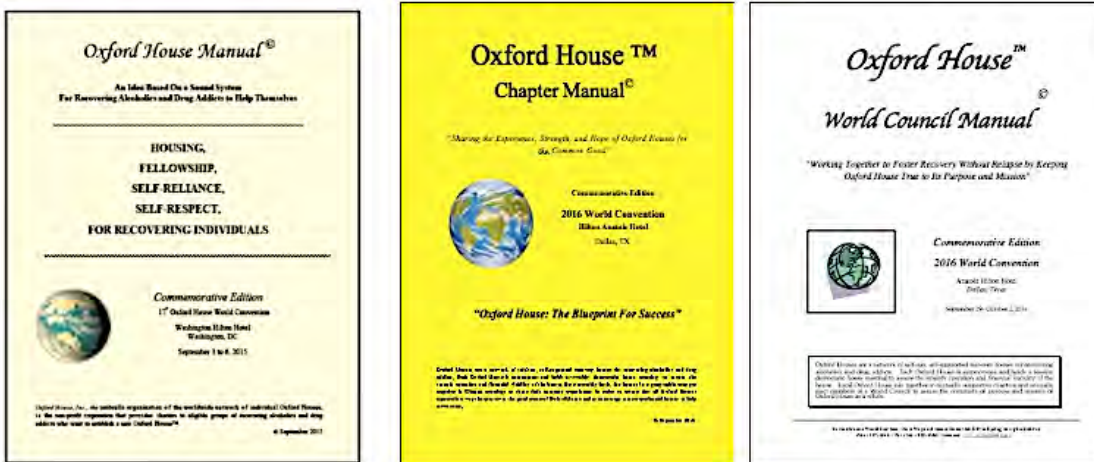

The group pictured at the left is a group of individuals from Chapters 20, 26, 29, 12, 30 and 4 who meet once a week via Zoom. All needed forms are sent with the Zoom invitation to each house; attendance is voluntary and comes with the opportunity to win an Amazon gift card paid for by chapter donations! Houses are not required to join chapters but most do so.

On this July night, there were 26 House members in attendance. The pandemic has required all Oxford Houses to adapt. Thanks to the internet and Zoom, adaptation has become widespread and everyone continues to follow the processes and procedures that characterize the uniform and skillful operation of all Oxford Houses.

Key Manuals To Keep Oxford Houses On Track

Common to all Oxford Houses is participatory democracy and pragmatic problem-solving, whether it involves personality problems or a broken dishwasher. If there is a problem, the group faces it and comes up with ways to resolve it. Each resident has an equal vote and pays an equal share of household expenses. Stigma associated with recovery from addiction is discouraged but stigma with respect to active addiction is not discouraged. A return to active addiction results in immediate expulsion from an Oxford House. The reason for this is that active addiction almost always results in bad behavior that adversely affects the individual and his or her family and community.

As suggested by the picture above of three basic Oxford House Manuals, expanding to meet the need has required organization of chapters, conventions, training sessions, state associations and periodic conventions in order for houses to monitor the performance of each other. The charter conditions are simple, but they require everyone's support to help keep the model on track.

Not everyone masters the new behavior necessary to stay away from using alcohol or other addictive drugs at the same pace. Some quickly adapt and some take a lifetime. The Oxford House concept is based on easy expansion of a supply of beds – simply rent another house – rather than arbitrarily limiting the time of residency of one individual in order to make room for another. When a particular house is staying full, stable and operating well, renting another house is a better way than imposing a time limit on residency in order to make room for the newcomer. The “expanding to meet the need” is something that began 45 years ago in the first Oxford House. The beds were full. Newcomers to recovery applied and needed a place to live that would support their road to recovery. The men in the first Oxford House pooled their resources after just three months of existence and the group split and opened a second house.

The Washington Network of Oxford Houses has organized itself to assist in continued expansion. The picture at the right is a storage unit paid for by Chapters 15 and 35 in Renton. The donation comes from a distributor of Amazon and consists of household goods (plates, bowls, salad plates, platters, brushes, rugs, etc.). Any new Oxford House opening in the state is able to get some basic start-up items. The Oxford House residents realize that every new house opening is just like newly-weds starting out with basic expenses for setting up a home. Several storage areas throughout the state help keep the material safe until a new request comes in. With a network of 343 Oxford Houses, the Washington State Oxford House residents are well organized.

When a new house is opening, residents from other houses pitch in to help get the new house ready for occupancy. The picture at the left shows Oxford House-Hawks Nest, which open in Port Angeles on June 1st. It is a house for 8 men and 4 children and is already functioning well.

All of the Oxford Houses in the state belong to chapters. A chapter is a local cluster of Oxford Houses designed to provide mutual assistance among its members. It elects chapter officers from among the officers of the individual houses making up a chapter. Chapter membership is voluntary, but most Houses join to help each other by sharing experiences. Chapters also organize fun events from picnics to sports and the monthly chapter meeting usually provides a common meal. Nothing like good food to attract a crowd! During the pandemic chapters meet via zoom but continue to plan events for when the pandemic gets under control.

Part 3 – Research and Oxford House

OHI relies on internal and independent third-party research to understand better not only the recovery process but also, more specifically, the role Oxford Houses can play in making long-term recovery without relapse the norm rather than the exception. The independent third-party research began in 1987 when Bill Spillaine, Ph.D., started teaching at Catholic University after he retired from NIDA. Dr. Spillaine asked to review the outcome records of individuals who had lived in an Oxford House from its beginning in 1975 through 1987. Everyone living in all 13 Oxford Houses at that time agreed to cooperate with him. Dr. Spillaine tracked down more than 1,200 former Oxford House residents to learn how many had stayed clean and sober. When he came to the leaders of Oxford House and reported that 80% had stayed clean and sober without relapse, the leaders asked, “What are we doing wrong to have 20% relapse rate?” Dr. Spillaine explained that the normal rate of sobriety without relapse was less than 20% and that the Oxford House resident outcome was exceptionally good.

Spillaine’s report led Congress to include a provision in the 1988 Anti-Drug Abuse Act [§2036 of PL 100-690, codified at 42 USC 300x-25] to encourage states to promote Oxford House development. That small start-up loan provision became the catalyst that helped Oxford House grow from 13 houses in the Washington, DC area to a national network of more than 2,900 houses.

Independent third-party research about Oxford House took off following a 1991 CBS “60 Minutes” segment about Oxford House. Dr. Leonard Jason, head of the DePaul University Community Research Center saw the program and immediately became interested in researching how Oxford Houses worked. His organization has now published more than 200 peer-reviewed articles and studies about Oxford House and its effect on recovery from addiction. One of his studies followed 897 residents in 219 Oxford Houses across the country and found that, over a 27-month period, only 13% had returned to active addiction.⁷

Research has been key to concluding that Oxford House™ can enable individuals to achieve long-term recovery without relapse. Because ‘recovery without relapse’ is the desired norm, not the exception, every Oxford House resident tries to accept responsibility for being a productive member of his or her Oxford House and also learn to have fun without the use of alcohol or drugs. By developing a new lifestyle, individuals gain confidence that life with using alcohol or illicit drugs is possible. That confidence carries over whenever a resident moves out of an Oxford House clean and sober. It has also produced general acceptance in the addiction treatment field that Oxford House living is an effective path to long-term recovery.

While research on AA has been limited by the role of anonymity in recovery, the willingness of Oxford Houses to open their doors to academic research gives us an opportunity to see recovery from addiction in action.

Dr. Jeffery Roth, M.D.
Editor, Journal of Groups in Addiction and Recovery
July 2010

The November 2016 US Surgeon General’s Report, “Facing Addiction In America,” singled out Oxford House™ as a key program in the continuum of successful treatment for addiction. The Report summarized the evidence-based treatment outcomes as follows:

⁷ Addictive Behaviors 32 (2007) 803-818

Outcomes:

- An 87 percent abstinence rate at the end of a 2-year period living in an Oxford House, four to five times greater than typical outcomes following detoxification and treatment.
- Comparisons between a group living in Oxford House and going to AA/NA versus a similar group that only goes to AA/NA show that the group living in an Oxford House had higher and more positive rates of self-efficacy and self-mastery.
- In a comparison study between Oxford House residents and a group that was assigned usual aftercare services, the Oxford House group had significantly lower substance use (31.3 percent vs. 64.8 percent), higher monthly income ($989 vs. $440), and lower incarceration rates (3 percent vs. 9 percent).

The Oxford House program was listed as a best practice on the National Registry of Evidence-based Programs and Practices [NREPP] in 2011. The NREPP was a searchable online registry of mental health and substance abuse interventions that had been reviewed and rated by independent reviewers. The purpose of the registry was to assist the public in identifying scientifically based approaches to preventing and treating mental and/or substance use disorders that could be readily disseminated to the field. The Oxford House Model is the only recovery house concept and system of operation listed on the NREPP.

The annual Oxford House National Convention has become a place where experts in the field of addiction present their most recent finding about the nature of alcoholism, drug addiction and the process of long-term recovery. Every Director of the federal Office of Drug Control Policy has been a speaker at the convention as have other leaders in the field of alcohol and drug addiction. While Covid-19 caused the cancellation of the 2020 Convention, the 2021 Convention is on track to take place.

At the Oxford House 2019 Convention, the first General Session included the following speakers: Dr. William Compton, Deputy Director of NIDA; Dr. Westley Clark, former 20-year Director of CSAT; Dr. Stuart Gitlow, former President ASAM; Dr. Jerome Adams, current Surgeon General, Dr. Joshua Sharfstein, head of Bloomberg Health Initiative at Johns Hopkins, and Professor John Kelly, Ph.D. of Harvard. A video of the session is available on the Oxford House website: www.oxfordhouse.org.

Dr. John Kelly, third from the left, emphasized that alcoholism and illicit drug addiction are chronic diseases and require measurement over time. He used five-point criteria for measuring the predictability of long-term successful recovery: Quality of Life; Happiness; Recovery Capital; Self-Esteem and Psychological Distress. At the five-year point following the start of recovery, life becomes balanced and continues to get even better. The Oxford House model is particularly well suited to help those new in recovery to make it to and beyond the initial five years.

The on-going research underscores that there are many paths to recovery. However, basic to any sure path of recovery is the need to recognize that every individual has unique characteristics that require time and a lot of support to bring about change. Dr. Kelly’s five-factor criteria for successful recovery provides the metrics for measuring an individual’s progress toward an increase in quality of life, happiness, recovery capital and self-esteem while having a decrease in psychological distress.

It is becoming increasingly clear that the self-help aspects of the Oxford House model provide a common purpose and sturdy support in achieving a comfortable and life-long recovery.

The Oxford House™ Path to Recovery

OXFORD HOUSE TRADITIONS

1. Oxford House has as its primary goal the provision of housing for the alcoholic and drug addict who wants to stay clean and sober.
2. All Oxford Houses are run on a democratic basis. Our officers serve continuous periods of no longer than six months.
3. No Member of an Oxford House is ever asked to leave without cause -- drinking, drug use, or disruptive behavior.
4. Oxford House members realize that active participation in AA and/or NA offers assurance of continued sobriety.
5. Each Oxford House should be autonomous except in matters affecting other houses or Oxford House, Inc. as a whole.
6. Each Oxford House should be financially self-supporting.
7. Oxford House should remain forever non-professional.
8. Propagation of the Oxford House, Inc. concept should always be conceived as public education.
9. Members who leave an Oxford House in good standing should become associate members
